MISFITS ON THE FLY. the Ways in Which a Man Car

One of the Ways in Which a Man Can Dress Well Cheaply.

A young man dressed in a beautifully finished and well-fitting black coat and vest, faultless trousers of expensive material, and a light, spring evercost of soft texture and lined throughout with silk, was asked by a friend how he managed to dress so handsomely with only $1,500 income. The young man hesitated, and then said, according to the New York Sun:

"If I put you up to the racket you musn't give me away. But how much do you think now this overcoat cost?"

"Seventy-five dollars, anyway."

"I paid twenty for it. It cost me altogether thirty, with alterations. If you could get these trousers made for $15 you'd do well. They cost me seven. This coat and vest, which are worth $50 made at the shop they came from, cost me exactly $38. Come, and I'll show you how I do it."

Down near to Broadway and Grand street the man turned east along a side street for a couple of blocks, and entered a very ordinary-looking clothing store. A swinging sign outside praised the fine stock of "gents' ready-made suits" to be found within. A wooden figure at the door displayed a cheap overcoat of coarse material and coarser make. Counters and shelves played a cheap overcoat of coarse material and coarser make. Counters and shelves within were loaded with the kind of suits he asked a black-haired youth.

"Got a pair of pacts would fit you with some fixin'," said "Henry," leading the way to the back of the store.

The trousers he produced were of expensive corded material, handsomely made, and bore the marks of a fashionable uptown tailor. On the inside waistband was worked the name of a well known dill trees. worked the name of a well-known club n "Oh," said the young man, "I've had his before. They'll fit well enough. How much?" "Them's extra fine," said Henry, apolo-getically. "Have to charge you eight an' a half for them. The young man took them. Henry then opened some drawers and showed a couple of suits, some black coats and vests, a dress suit or two, and a few spring overcoats. They were all of the finest material; all bore the imprint of fashionable tailors, and several had worked or written upon the lining names of persons well known.

The prices asked were ridiculously low.

"But if it is only a misfit place why all this secrecy?"

"Ah, you don't understand. The secrecy is not on the part of the shopkeeper; or if so only out of consideration for his customers. This place is one of a half dozen in the city where real howling swells work one of their sly little economy rackets. The man don't advertise his misfits, because that would give us away if any one saw us enter his place."

WOMAN'S QUICK WIT.

t Saves a Fortune, but Puzzles an Angry and Disgusted Man.

A woman's quick wit makes, her, when she has the courage to act upon it, a valuable aid in an emergency, says the Minneapolis Tribune. Some years ago, in the days when "road agents" abounded in Montana, a woman was traveling by coach to join her husband. One day a fellow-assenger said to her:

"I have one thousand dollars in my pocket-book, and feel uneasy about the road agents. Would you mind concealing it in your dress and returning it to me at men do stop us they are less liable to search you than me " She acceded to his request, hid the money in her dress, and the stage drove on without meeting a road agent until toward evening. Then the shout: "Throw up your hands!" was heard. The driver promptly pulled up, as four men on horseback with mesked faces expressed in the back, with masked faces, appeared in the road and covered him with their pistols.

Two of the highwaymen then rode to each side of the coach and ordered the sengers to give up their arms, which they did promptly.
"Now shell out?" said the robbers.

The passengers handed out their pocket-books; even the man who called in the voman's aid gave up a few dollars. He was congratulating himself upon his caution, when he heard the woman say in a uiet way:

"I have got $1,000, but I suppose I must give it up."
Suiting the action to the word, she hand ed over the man's roll of greenbacks. The robbers rode away, and then the man gave expression to his feelings by abusing the lady and accusing her of betraying his trust from sheer fright.

She smiled mysteriously.
"You will see, sir; but I can't explain

At the end of the journey she asked him to stay all night at her house, and said that her husband would be glad to see him.

"Yes, ma'am, I will come to your house," he answered, in the tone of an injured man; "it's the least you can do, ma'am, seeing that you have left me without a cent in the

She thought by giving up at once the $1,000 intrusted to her by you she would save herself from being searched by the robbers.

"Her quick wit saved me from a heavy loss, and I am much obliged to you for the use of the forced loan."

United States Currency in 1775.

Mr. Rutherford, of Oak Hall, has a number of very old and curious coins. Among them is an old, rusty-looking $6-bill issued by the United States in 1775, a year before the Declaration of Independence. The inscription on the bill reads: "This bill entitles the bearer to receive six Spanish milled dollars or the value thereof in gold and silver, according to the resolutions of the Congress held at Philadelphia the 10th of May, 1775." This was the Continental currency, the depreciation of which was so great as to give rise to the slang phrase: "Not worth a continental." This is signed by John Shee and countersigned, apparently, by handwriting in ordinary ink, the characters having become almost indiscernible, by T. L. Lawrence.

A CHINESE HOSPITAL

How Medical Science Is Practiced in the Flowery Kingdom.

I recently visited the Tung Wa Hospital at Hong Kong, and saw there many things of interest, the routine in a Chinese hospital being very different from that of a European one, says a writer in the St. James Gazette. In the early days of the colony the Chinese inhabitants used commonly to thrust out their sick and dying into the street, there to perish. To remedy into the street, there to perish. To remedy so scandalous a state of things the Govern-so scandalous a state of things the Government offered to provide a hospital for the exclusive use of the Chinese community, and this offer they accepted, with the provise that it should be under their own management. A suitable building was accordingly erected and handed over to a Chinese committee in 1867. The medical staff are all Chinese, and their practice, I was informed, is quite uninfluenced by was informed, is quite uninfluenced by European science.

As our chair coolies deposited us at the entrance to the hospital, a fine stone building situated in the center of the Chinese quarter, we observed a crowd of people in front of a series of large frames suspended against the wall and containing some hundreds of photographs. The stolid demeanor of the crowd gave us no hint as to the tragic nature of the exhibition; and it was only on our way out that a casual glance at the photographs revealed to us the ghastly truth. A few days previously one of the passenger steamboats which ply between Hong Kong and Canton took fire while she had on board over three hundred Chinese, who had gone to the jubilee cele-bration. Nearly all these poor people were lost, thoug the steamboat was run ashore and there were plenty of native boats about. The few who were saved owed their lives to a passing European vessel. The committee of the Tung Wa Hospital had had the bodies photographed, and the gruesome picture was shown in public for purposes of identification. A less careless glance now shows us some pathetic groups—wives, husbands, parents, children, searching for what might turn a terrible fear into a no less terrible certainty; but the indifference and stolidity of the Chinese character were still very apparent in the crowd.

The hospital itself is a large two-story building with verandas, and it contains large, airy wards of the usual character. Each ward, however, is divided by incomplete wooden partitions into eight cells, in each of which is accommodation for two patients, who thus enjoy a certain degree of the paramount importance in a hospital of cleanliness and good ventilation. The beds consisted of boards resting on trestles, and covered by a grass mat, with a bamboo pillow, and by each was an earthen pipkin containing medicine. Many of the sick were smoking—some tobacco, more of them opium. We heard that in cases which were considered hopeless patients were allowed to smoke opium ad lib.; if so, the percentage of hopeless cases must have been high, judging from the number of patients who gazed at us with lack-luster eyes and listless expression. The other patients noded pleasantly to us, and the present of a cigar or cigarette evoked numberless "Chinchins." The wards themselves were fairly clean, but the patients as a rule were dirty and among the surgical cases we observed many with undressed, unwashed wounds and other evidences of neglect. In the women's quarters we came upon a group of some thirty or forty young girls, many of them really pretty, whose merry laughter and the vigor with which they plied their chop-sticks, emptying bowls of rice, fish, etc., suggested that they could not be patients. We learned that they were kidnaped girls, mostly from the mainland, who had been rescued by the police and were lodged at the hospital until claimed by their , perhaps. It was most methodically arranged, and the staff were hard at work making up prescriptions. Round the walls were numberless drawers. mostly containing dried plants, shedde roots, minerals, etc.; also, vessels filled with bones, huge nauceous-looking boluses, as big as phimbs, etc. Among the bones some fragments of a tiger's frame were shown us as a great treasure, their use being to "makee trong," as the dispenser explained. "As each prescription was read portions of various roots, leaves, etc., were weighed out, wrapped up in brown paper, and marked with a brush. In an adjoining room we saw the rest of the process. Each packet of drugs was placed in an earthen pipkin, with water, and set to simmer on a charcoal fire, and the resulting decoction was sent to the patient in the pip-kin in which it had been made. We then glanced at the small-pox patients, each of whom was isolated in a large, dark, stone cell. Vaccinnation is little practiced by the Chinese, and consequently small-pox is very prevalent. But the committee of the hospital have organized a staff of vaccinators who are doing good work. We found a few lunatics confined in stronly-barred, padded cells, clean but dark; a few of the patients had chains on, but the majority were free. Our final visit was to the out-patient department, where we found a very portly and cheery native physician, who greeted us courteously and showed us his implements, etc., consisting of pitch-plasters. His last patient, a wizen-faced, voluble old woman, was just going away, but she turned back and showed us a sore leg, with a plaster on it. Evidently she was improving, for, pointing to her doctor, she improving, for, pointing to her doctor, she exclaimed; "He number one piecee," and then, her English being too scants to give then, her English being too scants to give expression to her gratitude, she proceeded to sound his praises in her own language, somewhat to the old gentleman's embarrassment, though he smiled and nodded pleasantly at her. After glancing in at a somewhat tawdry joss house we departed.

On our way back we visited the Alice Memorial Hospital, a new institution with a European medical staff. We were told that it was founded by a Chinese gentleman who had studied medicine in England, and found on his return that his countrymen were too nad studied medicine in England, and found on his return that his countrymen were too prejudiced to afford him any scope for his western science. The wards were clean ands well ordered and full of patients. Already it has drawn a good many patients away from the Tung Wa.

Extra Polish Misappue There are some persons so "refined" that they are as effectually encased from contact with their fellow-beings as if actually boxed in by glass and wood. A mispronounced word, an ungrammatical expression, is with them sufficient to outweigh any legree of moral worth. To be sure, it is pleasant to an educated person to meet both refinement and worth; but he who accepts the former at the price of the latter, or turns away from the latter because not framed in the former, is always a surface-creature whose skim-milk verdict of approbation is better lost than won.

The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, Halstead's paper, in commenting on his rejection, says:

What the Commercial Gazette said on the whole was the truth. Perhaps it was roughly expressed, but it was the truth all the same. For this Mr. Halstead was defeated, and for no other reason. There was no pretense of objection to him on the ground of unfitness; he was rejected by the Senatorial francis because he had the courage of his convictions and was not afraid to tell the truth. The result, therefore, cannot hurt him, but it is bound to hurt the guilty Senators. Perhaps, too, it may lead to a line of thought, or increase the force of a line of thought, or increase the force of a line of thought, that will abolish the United States Senate altogether, with its star chamber proceedings, or compel a change in the methods of election that will bring that body closer to the people and force its members outside of money influence. The people would be startled to know how many seats in the United States Senate were bought with money, and how many seats are therefore disgraced. This is a business that cannot last. The people will not tolerate it. This kind of corruption must be wiped out. menting on his rejection, says:

The Anglomaniacs who so greatly admired the last mentioned dudes, whose entire efforts seemed to be directed towards an endeavor to please the English free-trade Tories instead of trying to look after the interests of Americans, will probably not be able to see much in Mr. Lincoln's Administration to commend.

PRESS DISPATCHES TO THE GAZETTE. Naval Affairs

WASHINGTON, April 1.-No decision has yet been reached at the Navy Department in regard to sending vessels to take the place of the ships lost at Apia. Secretary Tracy said the matter was one which offers serious difficulties. The vessels now at Panama and other stations which might be otherwise available cannot well be spared from their present posts of duty. The Pensacola, undergoing repairs at the Norfolk Navy Yard, can be made ready four months. the Norfolk Navy Yard, can be made ready for sea in about four months, and a like period would be required to complete the repairs and fit for sea the Adams and Iriquois, now at the Mare Island Navy Yard. The Charleston, if accepted by the Government, can be made ready for service probably by the first of June. Secretary Tracy has fortunately ordered that the battery intended for the Yorktown be shipped to San Francisco and placed on board the Charleston. The order was issued March 20th, and the guns will soon be on the way.

The Alert is at Honolulu, and can reach Samoa in a month or forty days. The Richmond is in the river Rio de la Plata, on the east coast of South America, and must go around Cape Horn. The Adams is under repair at the Mare Island navy yard. Ten days or two weeks will serve to complete the repairs, and, after a few days additional consumed in taking in stores and coal, she may sail on a voyage which will take about a month.

The Yantic, now at Brooklyn, will be ready to sail on the 10th inst., probably to relieve the Richmond.

ARTESIAN WATER.

Three Wells Expected to Supply the City of Charleston.

In the artesian well at Charleston S. C', the property of the Carolina Construction Company, boring in which has been in progress for several years, water was struck Tuesday, February 5th, at a depth of 1,835 feet, and water is now flowing from it at the rate of 300 gallons per minute. The contract, however, calls for a depth of 2,000 feet, and as soon as the sand is sufficiently washed out the drill will be lowered again and the boring be resumed.

The history of the preceding wells shows that from this point down to 2,000 feet there are innumerable water-bearing beds of sand, and the assumption is that as each successive bed is reached a new vein will be opened and an increase flow of water will be the result. Taking into consideration the present flow of about three hundred gallons per minute, it is probably safe to say that the canceity probably safe to say that the capacity of the new well, when completed, will be at least five hundred gallons of water per minute, or nearly one million gallons a day.

This is the third deep well that has been bored in Charleston, and it is the largest of the three. It will cost the company about $40,000, and is probably the most valuable artesian well in the world, as it will have a diameter of six inches at the bottom. It is estimated that the combined capacity of the three wells will be at least a million and a half gallons of water a day, and that this constant source of supply will be sufficient to meet the requirements of the city for some time to come.

A SPRAINED ANKLE.

A Way to Treat it Without Caus ing welling. When a person gets a sprained ankle the physician usually has the ankle painted with fodine and the patient is kept in the house a week or ten days. A physician who treats such an accident in a different way relates a case as follows: "I went over to a a case as follows: "I went over to a grocery store and got a pound of common soda. Then I got a pot of boiling water, put it in a tub and put the soda into it. Then I got some woolen rags, dipped them in the solution and wrapped them around the injured member. I wrapped dry cloth around on the outside, so that the steam could do its work thoroughly. I changed the bandages every 15 minutes and had his nurse do the same when I went home that night. When I called the next day my patient was all right. the next day my patient was all right. It would have taken two weeks for that iodine to have done its work. A that iodine to have done its work. A peculiarity about this treatment is that no swelling remains and that the flesh is not even discolored."

Patti's Terms.

The London Globe says: The Par isian papers are wondering or affecting to wonder over the terms offered to Mme. Patti for a series of perform ances in La Plata. As people like to read about large sums of money, even when received by others, it is pleasant to learn that the impresarii of Buenos Ayres do not consider £1,200 a night for thirty nights, that is to say £36,000 for a calendar month, too much to risk upon Mme. Patti as a speculation. It is stated, moreover, in support of their prudence, that during her last South American tour her least profitable performance brought £2,520 into the treasury, while the best reached £4,560. By way of explanation, it appears that the cheapest seats at Buenos Ayres go for £4.

He said a man who could not figure on anything in a day could not figure at all, and he argued that his having prepared the plans and specifications did not give him any advantage. He inadvertently admitted that he met a fellow-workman to-day, who said he had not bid because he had been too busy and the time was so short; he said that a carpenter went to Burke Bros. and asked for their figures on foundation and plastering. The answer he received was that they had given one man their figures and would not give them to others.

THE ACCOMMODATING CATFISH

Which Comes to the Relief of the Poor Fisherman.

We hear a rumor that the catfish are biting in the Carson river, which is probably true. At any rate the catfish is deserving of honorable mencomes along and bites, thereby cheering the boy's heart. And when he bites he bites for keeps. He generally swallows the bait, hook and all. He is not particular as to bait. Anything that he can swallow, from a discarded rubber boot to the skin of a grasshopper, will do. He draws the line at what he can't swallow. The catfishing such as over counterages such as has such an open countenance, such a broad smile, that he invariably brings happiness to the heart of the fisher-man. Other fish may be scaly cus-tomers, but the catfish is not. The a culinary view, is the fact that when his head is chopped off there's so little left except the tail; but what there is left is very good eating.

Zecure Your Seats.

An exchange says of the Heine en-tertainment: "The enterprise of giving at moderate prices popular con certs in which excellent music, but not that of the most severely classical sort, should be heard, has been inaugurated by Mr. Peck at the Music Hall, urated by Mr. Peck at the Music Hall, and the first two concerts of the series took place on Wednesday and Thursday evening. The chief attraction—or, at least, that on which the advertisements laid the most stress—was the appearance of Josef Heine, the Blind violinist; and expectation has not been disappointed. Mr. Heine's mastery of the violin technique is fine, and his power of expression is far above the average of "star" performabove the average of "star" performers, sincerity and depth of sentiment being the chief characteristics of his style when dealing with serious music." Don't forget to engage your seats early, for it will be a rare opportunity and Permanently. It has been remarked that "to err is human." If that be so, says the Chicago Times, the humanity that clings about the compositor must be beyond all computation. The errors of that frail piece of humanity are fearfully and wonderfully contrived. That he has to compate many difficulties an execution. he has to combat many difficulties no one can doubt; that he takes at times an awful revenge every one knows. How often has the gifted writer dashed off a stirring arti-cle, which, with a smile, is handed to the PIGHTY ACRES OF LAND SITUATED If one mile southwest from Reno; old house on same; no improvements. This land when cleared and seeded will sell for $100 to $125 per acre. Lands same description no improvements, adjoining commanding $75 per acre. Parties purchasing said 80 acres can make big wages clearing and improving same. This is a bargain to a man not afraid of work. I will sell the land at ex, tremeiy low price of $28 per acre. Terms, cash. Railroud title; also 160 acres; 80 acres seeded; fenced, good mew 1½ story house, outhouses, etc., corrals and stables; water sufficient to irrigate too acres. Price, $4,000, npositor to be put into the obedient types it give it a million voices! and, by glancing at his paper next morning, the author discovers that his name is "Dennis," and that he hasn't any other. Ah, yes; how often?

But the strange, sad thing about the errors is, and this may appear paradoxical, they are always funny. They may knock the legs from under a production that would create a sensation in the political world; they may change entirely the writer's meaning in his brief tribute to the worth of a departed friend; they may shatter with one fell displacement of a comma the graceful acknowledgement of favors received; or they may "pi" the sentiments of a piece of poetry—but in one case as well as all, of poetry—but in one case as well as all, they are funny, very, to everybody but the funny, very, to everybody but the writer. Even the compositor who made the bull, and the proof-reader who passed it, will say "ha! ha!" in their sleeves while being dragged over the bowlders by the

Of course, the compositor is not always to blame—not always. The penimanship of some writers is in its swaddling-clothes yet, and when they go a little beneath the surface of a subject the compositor has only to rely on his sight and "set up" the copy for what it looks like. As a rule, copy for what it looks like. As a rule, ministers write manuscript compared with which the figures on a Chinese laundry-check tell a plain, unvarnished tale. It was said of a well-known Presbyterian preacher that if he had jotted down his thoughts on a piece of yellow paper and presented it to the Chinese laundry clerk he would have received any bundle in the wash-house.

Some of the errors made by compositors which have found their way into print may bear repeating. A parson who preached a fairly good sermon, but wrote a viliainous hand, was shocked to find a sentence that should have read: "But sorrow not, nor should have read: "But sorrow hot, nor grieve; take the final steps now, and sin no more," appear in print as: "Take the filial stiffs now," etc. Perhaps the good brother was in need of his own counsel at that particular time.

Vesselmen of this port were amazed to learn some time ago that "the schooner Jessie Lee had left last night for Erie with a cargo of cats." When the marine editor, who had written oats, saw this he felt

A literary woman, whose headquarters are in Boston, and whose handwriting, had it been on the wall, would have proved a poser for Belshazzer, appears every week in one or two papars. She writes about philosophy and Buddhist poetry, and things of that sort, and is very choice in her language. A short time ago she wrote a couple of paragraphs about Emerson, in which she said that gentleman was the indefatiga-ble "keeper of a diary." The compositor, who, doubtless, was an old and trusted friend of the philosophical gentleman, knew Posters, &c better, and the readers were gravely in-formed that Emerson was the indefatigable

"heifer of a dairy." That gave an oppor-tunity for a display of philosophy.

A poet whose writing is like nothing in the wrote:
"Statesmen, princes, rulers all."

The quiet night and heaven alone knows what his remarks were when he found the line printed: "Steamboats, schooners, tugs and all."

A dramatic critic in a handsome notice of charming young actress, whose treatment of Portia afforded him much pleasure, said: "Her love for Portia made acting Weekly Examiner and Weekly Gazette easy." That was all right, but what the types made him say was "her love for Peoria," etc. A compositor who was better acquainted with the geography of the West than with Biblical lore set up the phrase: "From Alpha to Omega" as "From Alton to Omaha." He started for those places the

An art critic in writing favorably of a picture by Bizzaro, was shocked to find that by some means known only to the compos-itor and proof-reader the following sentence had got into the criticism: "13,133,070 shows one of the finest in the collection." A revivalist, who was preaching at the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church in this city, said: "Ye were born to suffer as ye were born to be rewarded, for well hath it been written: 'No cross, no crown.'" The latter part of the sentence appeared in print: "No cows, no cream," which, although as truthful as the assertion of the minister, was not apropos.

Errors are quite frequent in headlines The sentences are usually so short and there is so little context to read by that a very competent man is liable to go wrong in setting up manuscript. A head that attracted some attention, more indeed than the one intended, "Here and There," appeared as "Heads and Tails."

"Heads and Tails."

Another head, written "Partisan Strife," was printed as "Patrick's Strut." "Presby-terian Synod" glared out of the types as "Presumptuous Snipe." "Hebrew Theatric Notes" attracted some attention when an-nouncing "He Blew the Critic's Nose."

mouncing "He Blew the Critic's Nose."

Many other errors of a like nature could be noted; those given will show what writers and compositors have to contend with. It rarely happens, however, that a plain writer finds his articles misprinted. The compositor is, in most cases, intelligent and painstaking and not infrequently more capable of writing the article he is putting in type than the one who penned it. Novel Umbrella Holder.

A funny incident of a Quaker funeral was noticed by a Brooklyn correspondent. A grave-looking gentleman with an unusually tall, white hat entered, and, seeing no rack in the hall, placed his hat on the floor just behind the door. Pretty soon another grave Quaker entered with a large, dripping umbrella, and, peering anxiously for the usual receptacle, saw in the gloom the hat resting on the floor. His eyesight was probably poor, for he mistook it for one of the new umbrella holders and in it he deposited his dripping umbrella. This was an example for those who followed, and in a short time the solemn-looking hat was stanchly holding a dozen umbrellas. At the end of the services the water in the hat was half an Novel Umbrella Holder. pervices the water in the hat was half an neh in depth.

The Reign of Starch.

Now that starched linen is yielding largely to soft wool it is interesting to know that the reign of starch has continued for a little over 300 years. The first to teach publicly how to starch linen was a Dutch woman, Mrs. Dingley. She charged $25 for teaching the art, and (2 for showing how to make the starch. Starch in those days was made solely from wheat; but now, or since 1841, it is made mostly from corn. Most of our daily physical discomfort come from the use of stiffened garments, especially about the neck. Let the reign of starch cease; and all hall, King Wool.

The History of a Two Hundred Thousand Dollar Bet,

St. Joe, Mo., Covered in Ten Days-Johnny Fry's Famous Rids on His Noble Steed Sylph.

"I may be a little hazy as to the exact figures, but in the main my recollection is correct."

The speaker was an elderly gentleman on the Oakland ferry-boat, who had just returned to California, after an absence of many years in the East. He had been con-trasting the five overland railways of the present time with the slow, toiling ox-team with which he crossed the plains in 1850, and, says the San Francisco Alta, the con versation had incidentally drifted to the pony express, so famous in its day.

"Twenty-nine years ago St. Joseph, Mo., was the western terminus of the railway system of the country. Beyond St. Joseph the stage-coach, ox-train and kindred methods were resorted to for the purpose of maintaining communication with the Pacific slope. The coast was by that time pretty well settled, and business men began to wish for a rapid overland mail

"In the winter of 1860 Wall street was at work in Washington endeavoring to get a subsidy of $10,000,000 for carrying the malis overland one year between New York and San Francisco

"William H. Russell, backed up by Secretary-of-War Floyd, looked upon the scheme as a very extravagant proposition, and said that he could put on a mail line from San Francisco to St. Joseph that would cover the distance—1,950 miles—in ten days. So confident was he that he pro-fessed himself willing to wager $20,000 on the proposition.

"The schemers for the big mail contract felt bound to meet the bluff and took up the wager, April 8, 1860, being fixed for the time of starting.

"A. B. Mille r, who died in Denver a few years ago, was Russell's partner and general manager, and to him Russell looked for the successful outcome of the venture. Miller was positive that a pony express could be established which would enable his partner to win his prodigious wager.

"There was no time to be lost, and Miller set about his task with energy. He purchased three hundred of the fleetest horses he could procure, and engaged the services of one hundred and twenty-five men. Eighty of the men were engaged as postriders, and of course were especially chose for their daring and light weight-the lighter the man the better for the horse, as some parts of the route had to be covered at the killing rate of twenty-five miles an hour.

"By the day set for starting every thing was in readiness, and before the smoke cleared away from the muzzle of the signal gun on the steamer Sacramento at the hour of noon, April 8, 1860, Billy Baker, mounted on Border Ruffian, Mr. Miller's famous saddle horse, dashed away toward the Sierras, covering his twenty miles in forty-nine min-

"Deep snow lay in the mountain passes, and to Salt Lake valley slow time was made, so that from the valley on it was necessary to make extra fast speed to win the huge

"All went well until the crossing at Julesburg was reached. To his dismay the courier found the Platte river high up in its banks and a strong current running. Fearlessly horse and rider plunged into the turbid stream, but only the man reached the opposite bank. His gallant steed mired in the quicksands and was drowned. The courier saved his precious mail pouch and had to walk ten miles to the next relay sta-

"Johnny Fry-I remembered him well-was one of the famous men of his day on the border. Tough and wiry, he was as light as a cat, and as a rider he never knew light as a cat, and as a rider he never knew an equal. To him fell the duty of riding the last sixty miles of the long race. He had six horses, thoroughbreds they were, too, to

When the courier arrived at the sixtymile post out of St. Joseph he was one hour behind time. Johnny had to make up that lost hour or the wager was lost. Miller had considered all this when he selected

Johnny Fry to make the final dash. "Three hours and thirty minutes in which to make the ride of sixty miles. Never before nor since has such a purse been run for in America as would be won or lost by

"As the hour drew near for Fry's arrival at St. Joseph thousands of people lined the river banks, gazing with feverish expectancy in the direction of the woods from which the horse and rider should emerge into the open country-one mile from the

" As the minutes flew by the excitement became intense, and the people spoke to each other in a subdued sort of way. Seven minutes and the wager would be lost, when suddenly a bright-eyed youngster caught sight of the anxiously-looked-for courier, and the yell that went up from the crowd reached the ears of the rider a mile Horse and rider fairly flew on the wings of the wind. Feathery flakes of foam streaked the panting flanks of the noble steed as she, with wide-distended and bloodred nostrils, bore the courier to his journey's end, covering the last mile in one min-ute and fifty seconds. The little mare Sylph had won the wager, and there were five minutes and a fraction to spare."

Justice to Country Editors.

It is regarded as something quite smart for metropolitan newspaper scribblers to sneer at country editors. Horace Greeley's old remark is trotted out whenever a city editor wishes to crush his rural brother. It is true that some fools and some knaves edit country journals, but as a rule these provincial editors are hard-working, shrewd, fair-minded and influential men. They come nearer representing public sentiment than their city brethren, because they are than their city brethren, because they are closer to the people. The metropolitan press owes its distinction chiefly to men who have been trained in country newspaper offices. In fact, few men are properly equipped to even attempt to represent sentiment in this Republic who have not lived in the country. So much for those who sneer at the "rural rooster."

The young alligators which are used for this style of trimming are from six to ten inches long and must be the real thing, stuffed and with bright glass eyes and arranged so as to appear to be crawling up the front trimmings of ribbon bows.
